OGONTOH

Born in 1923.
We have kept and continue to keep the traditional taste.

Golden brilliance born from craftsmanship

The first OGONTOH was made in 1923. Until then, the company sold golden candies (Kingintoh) made from just sugar and starch syrup in Miyakonojo, Miyazaki Prefecture. When the company moved to Sakai City, Osaka Prefecture, it changed the name to OGONTOH. It was also at this time that the candy was made into the rectangular shape it is today. The original mold, which does not need to be coated with mold release oil, and the technique that prevents the formation of air bubbles have allowed us to make a smooth and beautiful candy akin to a jewel.

Additive-free good taste from just sugar and starch syrup.

During World War II, the company faced an existential crisis due to a shortage of sugar, our primary ingredient, and the loss of the factory from air raids. However, for people who missed the taste of OGONTOH, we did all we could to gather ingredients and resume business. Since then, the company has continued to follow the old-fashioned manufacturing method, "using just sugar and starch syrup, without any flavoring or coloring additives." Although the lifestyles and tastes of Japanese people have changed in many ways, the natural taste and aroma of OGONTOH has always been deeply loved by everyone.

OGONTOH

Simple and good taste made from just sugar and starch syrup.
